The Marr Monument.

There was unveiled at Fairfax Court house today a monument to Captain John Quincy Marr, the first Confederate soldier to fall in actual combat in the civil war. The date of Captain Marr's death was June 1, 1861, and the spot where he fell was only a few yards from the courthouse green, upon which the monument has been erected. He was captain of the Warrenton Rifles, which company he organized in 1850. It was as captain of this company that he entered the Confederate army. His company of one hundred men was ordered to Fairfax courthouse to strengthen its somewhat meagre defense, on May 31, 1861. About 3 o'clock next morning the riflemen were aroused by the news of the approach of the enemy's cavalry. They formed at once and their captain led them to a commanding position near the courthouse. Soon after he had called them to halt a body of cavalry rushed upon them and firing was begun. It was pitch dark and no one saw their leader fall, but his "Halt!" was the last word he ever heard to utter. In the meantime the riflemen were reinforced by Colonel R. S. Ewell, who was commander of the post. Led by him the riflemen thrice repulsed the enemy and finally drove them off, leaving two prisoners behind them. When daylight dawned Captain Marr was the only Confederate missing, and he was discovered lying in the long grass with a bullet through his heart. The Federal loss was estimated at thirty.

The monument which the Virginians of Fairfax unveiled on their courthouse green on the anniversary of Captain Marr's death is a rough hewn shaft of Richmond gray granite, weighing six tons, nine feet high and four feet wide at its base. On the square space polished upon its front surface is the following inscription:

"This marks the scene of the opening conflict of the war of 1861-5. In it John Quincy Marr, captain of the Warrenton Rifles, who was the first Confederate soldier killed in action, fell June 1, 1861.

The unveiling of the monument was with imposing ceremonies and in the presence of a large concourse of people, including large numbers of ex-Confederates, many coming from a distance to take part in or witness the ceremonies.

The ceremonies were held in the court house on account of the rain. Captain Ballard called the assembly to order and introduced Chaplain Meade, of Marr Camp, who made an impressive prayer. Mr. R. W. Moore was subsequently requested to act as master of ceremonies. Mr. Moore introduced Dr. Clarkson, of Prince William, who read a poem in an impressive manner. He was followed by Attorney General Anderson, who delivered the oration of the day. Gov. Montague and Judge Christian subsequently delivered addresses, after which a recess was taken for dinner. Later speeches will be made by Hon. John Goode, General Hunton, Judge Grimsley and Maj. R. W. Hunton. Among those present are Miss Jennie Marr, sister of the late Capt. Marr, Congressman Lamb, Judges Keith and Nicols, Colonels Mortimer and Edmund Berkeley and others.

Soldier Drowned.

Frank McComesky, a private of the Forty-seventh coast artillery, at Fort Hunt, was drowned early yesterday evening. Private McComesky and his two companions, Privates Ramey and Gleason, were returning to Fort Hunt in a sailboat and had reached a point about two hundred yards south of the shipyard wharf when McComesky fell overboard. All attempts to rescue him were unavailing. The Washington police boat Vigilant came down during the night and efforts were made to recover the body. Additional efforts were made today. A number of his comrades came here from Fort Hunt to aid in the search. McComesky was twenty-two years old and had been stationed at Fort Hunt for eight months. The drowning caused considerable excitement in the southeastern section of the city. McComesky's companions returned to Fort Hunt on the electric cars.

Art Exhibit.

On the 18th of last month was held the annual art exhibit of the pupils of Arlington Institute. Miss Catherine C. Crichester is a most diligent and enthusiastic teacher, and the exhibit of her pupils' work this year showed that her labors have been crowned with success. Tree-hand drawing has for some years been a special feature of the primary department of the school, and this year the primary work was quite up to its usual degree of excellence. The work in charcoal and water-color of the more advanced class was also much admired. Miss Crichester has taken several of her former pupils abroad for study and travel. Her friends in Arlington Institute wish for her on this trip the best of recreation and pleasure, together with fresh inspiration for her chosen work.

The Weather.

"At the time I began using Hay's Hair-Health and Hairina Soap my hair had been falling out and I had several bald places on the front and sides of my head. They are now fully covered with silken hair and I am only using the second bottle. My hair looked faded in places, but it is now all of the natural dark brown color."

—Mrs. Ida Solomon, Paloo Park, Cook Co., Ill.
